MAKES HIS HOME IN DRY SUBMARINE
French Writer Has Built Weird Structure
Paris—France's literary life is the most curious of the world, and the most curious of the world is the life of the French writer.

Being original in all things, Deleuze has not been able to find a place to live in his own home in Paris, thus creating the most novel residence in a city, where many seek the unusual and bizarre.

Deleuze's home is one of the grandest of the world, and it is one of the grandest of the world, and it is one of the grandest of the world.
